

Changes with Zorp Gateway URL filter

March 04, 2024

Abstract

Zorp Gateway has always provided support for the usage of a category-based URL filter, leveraging an up to date database. However, Zorp Gateway, from version 7.0.5 on, offers a new, more customizable filter as well.

1. Problem statement

An extensive, well-functioning, categorizing URL filter is a fundamental service in relation to information security. In the lack of the URL filter, any unwanted network traffic puts additional load on any security gateway. In addition, by using a proper URL filter we can reduce the access to any content that poses potential threat to our company network.

The Zorp Gateway provides an even more extensive URL filter from version 7.0.5 on, but for its proper functioning, it is necessary to manually match the new filter categories with the categories defined in the previous version of the URL filter. Following the update to Zorp Gateway version 7.0.5, the filter categories defined in the previous version are still present in the configuration, but will be grouped to the uncategorized elements. For the elements of the 'uncategorized' category, the operations defined for this group earlier apply (for example, acceptance, prohibition, redirection). If it is not configured otherwise, the elements will be accepted.

It is also important to consider that the handling of whitelist/blacklist has also changed.

2. The solution

The usage of this highly extensive and effective categorizing URL filter from Zorp Gateway version 7.0.5 requires that we manually match the new filter categories with the corresponding old filter categories.

We also need to make changes in the definition of whitelist and blacklist.

3. Technical details of the solution

Prior to the update, we need to check whether we have the necessary, at least 1.7 GB free space on the partition including the `"/var/lib/zorp/urlfilter/"` folder. Following the update, the new database utilizes close to 850 MB space. After the update of Zorp Management Server (ZMS) to version 7.0.5, when signing in to Zorp Management Console (ZMC), the following notification is displayed reminding on the changes with the URL filter.

- Step 1. Choose the proper URL filter proxy under Zorp component → Proxies tab.
- Step 2. Edit the self.url_category under the Attribute column of the menu item.
You can find the filter categories from the previous version of the URL filter under the Key menu item.
These items now belong to the 'uncategorized' group category.

Step 3. Click the Edit key button and the selection menu of the new filter categories will be displayed:

- Step 4. Choose the new filter category corresponding to the old one, from the list. For finding the corresponding filter categories, see the document, listing the new filter categories in the Appendix of this document. It is not necessary to change all the filter categories at once. The remaining elements will still remain as 'uncategorized' elements in the background.

While searching for the filter categories, it might be helpful to use the Ctrl + F key combination. Alternatively, when starting typing, the findings matching the first keystrokes will pop up in a list of highlights. Among these highlighted matches we can choose with the 'up' and 'down' arrows.

Step 5. Create a blacklist and whitelist if necessary. From Zorp Gateway version 7.0.5, this can be achieved with the help of a free text editor, on the Zorp Node → New → Text editor → URL filter black and whitelists path.

The choices for blacklist, whitelist or * options are also added the URL category list:

Step 6. After clicking the Commit button, validate the changes with the Check configuration option.

The update of the URL filter database is performed by the `zavupdate` command, run by the cron job, every day at 11 pm by default. Use the same login name and password necessary for accessing the apt repo. All these ensure a solution that can be updated more easily.

4. Conclusion

Although the introduction of the new URL filter requires manual matching of the new filter categories with the corresponding old ones, it ensures the usage of a more reliable and more advanced URL filter solution with the information security solution of the Zorp Gateway.
